HONOLULU, HAWAII—“That our children of many nationalities and races, born far from the centers of art, may receive an intimation of their own cultural legacy and wake to the ideals embodied in the arts of their neighbors.” That is how the museum’s founder Anna Rice Cooke began her dedication statement in 1927.

And the museum continues that mission with this month’s Bank of Hawaii Family Sunday: Hello My Name Is. Kids can see the fascinating exhibition Identify Yourself, which highlights textile art that records cultural histories—such as a 15th-century tapestry of the queen of Babylon—and go on a docent-led tour through the Arts of the Philippines gallery.

Families can get their portrait taken by Photo Ops Hawai‘i, and then make a customized picture frame for their photograph. Kids can also make a sipa—a Filipino footbag—and learn how to play the game.

Taking the stage in the Central Courtyard at 11 a.m. are the acoustic singer-songwriters Harrison & Hannah. They are followed by hip hop, ballet, musical theater, and tumbling performances by The Movement Center students at noon. At 1:30 p.m. the Filipino Community Center’s music troupe Banda Kawayan plays Filipino folk and pop music on bamboo instruments.

This month’s Family Film Sunday selection is Belle and Sebastian. Not to be confused with the Scottish indie pop band, this film is based on the acclaimed children’s book of the same name (which spawned a 1960s French children’s TV series, which inspired the band name). The movie follows an orphaned seven-year-old who lives with his adoptive grandfather and sister in an alpine village in Nazi-occupied France. When Sebastian meets a stray Pyrenean mountain dog, they quickly become close companions and wind up helping to lead Jewish villagers on a dangerous trek through the French Alps.

Family Film Sunday is free. In fact, children age 17 and under receive free admission to all films and concerts at the Doris Duke Theatre (except on festival opening nights)

The museum invites visitors to enter the popular monthly drawing contest, for children ages 1 to 17. The museum gives contestants a theme and drawing supplies.

The winner receives a Supporting-level membership to the Honolulu Museum of Art ($100 value), and his or her artwork is used to create the following month's event brochure and is posted on the museum website. Last month seven-year-old Addy Ching won with her interpretation of Hello My Name Is. [link to page with winner]

FAMILY DAY AT SPALDING HOUSE

Take a free shuttle up to Spalding House where the fun continues. Kids can identify themselves by making an ID card using their thumbprint, and answering the questions: "What's your name?" "What's your favorite hobby?" and "Where is your family from?" Then families can join storyteller Nancy Kulp outside of the Spalding House Café at noon, 12:30 p.m. and 1:30 p.m. as she tells stories about identity and different cultures.

About Bank of Hawaii Family Sunday

Since 2004, the third Sunday of every month at the Honolulu Museum of Art has been free to the public, thanks to Bank of Hawaii. Each event features a program of art activities, entertainment and demonstrations held throughout the museum.
