HONOLULU, HAWAII— Now that the exhibition Art in a Time of Chaos is on view, visitors to the museum can be the first in the world to see treasures from Six Dynasties period China discovered in the past 60 years. The works reflect a time in Chinese history that largely shaped Chinese culture as we know it today. This Father's Day the museum focuses on the exhibition with Bank of Hawaii Family Sunday: Everybody was Kung Fu Fighting.

After seeing the ancient Chinese art families can move as fast as lightning over to the Palm Courtyard, where they can create rubbings inspired by the exhibition that are so beautiful, in fact it's a little bit frightening.

Khanate of the Golden Horde once again invades the museum with expert timing for weapons and martial arts demonstrations. Kids can take a bow and make a stand at an archery station on the museum's front lawn. Meanwhile, inside the museum walls The Still and Moving Center's self-defense and kung fu demonstrations feature everything from a feinting, to a slip, and a kickin' from the hip.

This month's Family Film Sunday selection is Havoc in Heaven \(大口天口\). Inspired by the 16th-century novel Journey to the West, the 1965 animated Chinese film follows the mischievous Monkey King as he acquires the famed As-You-Will Gold-Banded Cudgel and goes up against the might of the Jade Emperor

At Doris Duke Theatre, children age 17 and under always receive free admission to all films and concerts (except on festival opening nights).

The museum invites visitors to enter the popular monthly drawing contest, for children ages 1 to 17. The museum gives contestants a theme and drawing supplies.

The winner receives a Supporting-level membership to the Honolulu Museum of Art ($100 value), and his or her artwork is used to create the following month's event brochure and is posted on the museum website. Last month, five-year-old Alexandra Win-Tsuen Chan Schmidt won with her interpretation of Everybody was Kung Fu Fighting.

Oh-hoh-hoh-hoooooooh, ha!

FAMILY DAY AT SPALDING HOUSE

Take a free shuttle up to Spalding House where the fun continues. Kids can use calligraphy techniques, watercolor, and maps to make a collage in the style of a Chinese scroll. Then at 12 p.m.-12:30 p.m. and 2 p.m.-2:30 p.m. storyteller Nancy Kulp tells famous Chinese myths outside of Spalding House Café.

About Bank of Hawaii Family Sunday

Since 2004, the third Sunday of every month at the Honolulu Museum of Art has been free to the public, thanks to Bank of Hawaii. Each event features a program of art activities, entertainment and demonstrations held throughout the museum.

See more information about the event.
